OCTANE .22

The Umarex Octane .22, powered by the ReAxis Gas Piston, gives the Octane more punch, more power, and more speed. Its SilencAir five-chamber noise dampening system audibly reduces downrange noise.

A PATRIOTIC
MOVEHUNTING REVOLUTION THE LIFE AND ART OF A RECOILLESS—
AND ACTION LOVER—IN THE PAST

I had been eagerly anticipating a review of the Mossberg Patriot rifle (May/June) ever since I learned of its upcoming production. So I was rather disappointed to see that Mr. Sundra felt it necessary to waste the first five paragraphs of the article waxing philosophically on the perceived beauty of a rifle based on the appearance of the stock.

Eye of the Beholder

I had been eagerly anticipating a review of the Mossberg Patriot rifle (May/June) ever since I learned of its upcoming production. So I was rather disappointed to see that Mr. Sundra felt it necessary to waste the first five paragraphs of the article waxing philosophically on the perceived beauty of a rifle based on the appearance of the stock.

There are plenty of people out there, myself being one, who believe a hunting rifle is a tool to be used—not a piece of art to hang on a wall. How a rifle looks takes a distant back seat to how it performs, and many others must feel the same way—unless you have a different reason for the surge in popularity of hunting with AR-style rifles, which are downright ugly.

Yes, a beautiful rifle is a magnificent thing to behold—and my very last choice if I was headed off on a rugged mountain hunt. Drop an expensive rifle with a beautiful Claro walnut stock on a rock-strewn hillside, and feel the tears well out of your eyes as you see dollar signs flying out of your pockets to repair the damage! Drop a synthetic or Kevlar stocked rifle in the same manner, and you can repair the damage at home with a can of spray paint.

So how the stock on the new Patriot fits, how good the inletting is, how good a recoil pad it has—all are valid topics on how the test rifle performs overall. Extolling the virtues of beautiful wood over a stock with “the visual appeal of a 2x4” is merely a personal preference and not helpful to the review.

What’s the old quote from

Townsend Whelen, “Only accurate rifles are interesting”? Notice he doesn’t mention anything about eye appeal.

B. Fox
Wilsonville, OR

On the Mark

Your publication is right on the mark regarding the CZ-USA 557 rifle (May/June). I now have a .270 sporter, which is my fourth .270, and I will recommend it always. I was also glad to see Mossberg has discontinued the 4x4 [and replaced it with the new Patriot]. That’s a good thing.

Pete Careaga
Iva, SC

The .280 Rules

I have a habit of starting a magazine from the back, and last issue I began with Craig Boddington’s “The C Factor” (January/February). I found out that him and Scott Rupp were going on mountain hunts, and I wanted to ask Craig why Scott Rupp is the editor of the magazine and Boddington is just a writer? Answer: Because Rupp is smart! You know why Rupp is smart? Because he shoots a .280, a cartridge Craig says he doesn’t have much confidence in.

Then, in Brad Fitzpatrick’s “Second-Fiddle Cartridges,” he writes about the .280 Ackley Improved. The only competitor it’s got is the 7mm Rem. Mag. I have a .280 AI, and I’ve been reloading for it since 1970. I’ll tell you one thing: If Craig had a .280 AI he’d throw the rest of his guns in the river. My reloads will outrun a factory loaded 7mm Rem. Mag. any day of the week, with a lot less powder.

Although Fitzpatrick’s article was a very good one, he’s a little short on velocities for the Ackley. With H4831 I get an average velocity of 3,035 fps. I’ve since switched Reloder 22 for an average of 2,975 fps for a 160-grain bullet out of a 27-inch Douglas barrel.

Doug Ehrk
Orland, CA

Thanks, Mr. Ehrk. I’m pretty sure that’s the first time anyone’s accused me of being smart.—JSR

INTRODUCING THE WORLD'S QUIETEST .30 CALIBER SUPPRESSOR

SOCOM300 SPS

120 dB | 300 Blackout subsonic ammo

The new SOCOM300 SPS is the quietest suppressor on the market for both subsonic and supersonic 300 Blackout rifles. This new suppressor also works exceptionally well with 5.56 carbines and .308 or 300WM rifles. Its unprecedented performance is due to the proprietary baffle system that was designed and built here at SureFire to our demanding specifications. Nothing comes close to the capability of this versatile suppressor. It's exactly what you would expect from the company that won the most rigorous USSOCOM evaluation in history.

Ideal for use with 300 Blackout along with 5.56, .308, and 300WM
